INTRODUCTION AND OVERVIEW

Introduction

Higher education institutions work together across national boundaries for many purposes, including: expanding the horizons of research; improving teaching, and enhancing cultural development and transmission of knowledge. Indeed for institutions that are concerned by universal reality and truth, international cooperation and partnership are intrinsic elements of their mission. Ever-increasing cooperation has been facilitated in recent years by improving the understanding of system differences, as well as by working in a common policy direction. For example, this century in Europe degree structures have converged into three main cycles, quality assurance has developed on the basis of common European standards and guidelines and the European Research Area has strengthened cooperation among institutions.

Does the organisation of the academic year also facilitate cooperation in Europe?

The academic calendar plays a crucial role in determining the feasibility and preferences for student and staff mobility. In projects which seek high levels of institutional cooperation, such as the European Universities Initiative, planning mobility periods for students and staff would be easier if the academic year started and finished at similar times, and if it were organised into the same or similar number of terms or semesters. Differences in start and end dates, holidays, and exam periods can affect the timing and duration of exchanges. If the calendars don't match, students or staff may have difficulty in finding suitable exchange opportunities, and institutions with different academic schedules may need to negotiate specific agreements to facilitate mobility.

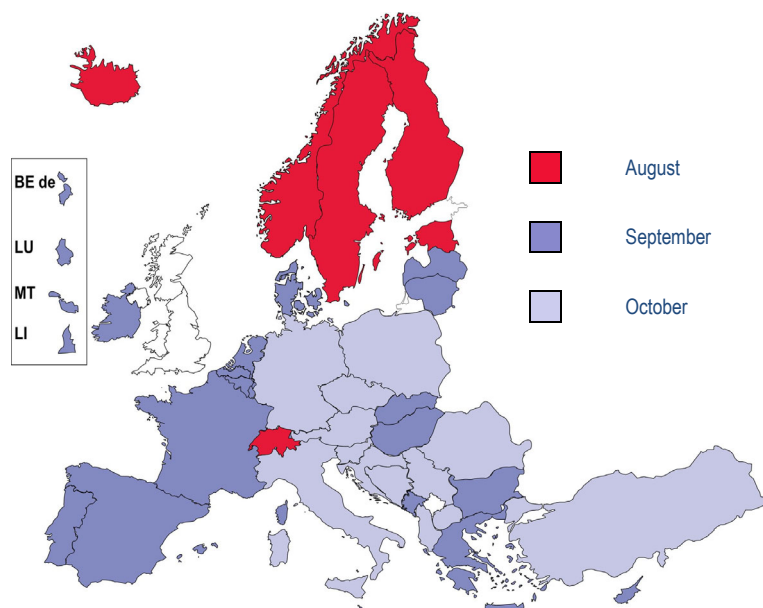

Harmonising calendars is not, however, a simple matter. Seasons arrive at different times in different parts of the continent, and holiday periods are embedded in cultural traditions. While many other structural aspects of higher education systems have converged, there has so far been little momentum for greater harmonisation of academic calendars in Europe.

This report outlines how the key aspects of academic calendars vary across Eurydice member countries and institutions.

Beginning of the academic year

Source: Eurydice.

The organisation of the academic year displays significant national diversity – and sometimes variation within countries regarding how different types of institution organise their year. Three main patterns can be identified:

- 1) Six countries/higher education systems begin the academic year in August. These are mostly Nordic countries, but also include Estonia and Switzerland (although in the case of Switzerland, the official beginning of the academic year precedes the start of teaching activities by around seven weeks).
- 2) The majority of countries (20 higher education systems) begin the academic year in September.
- 3) A further 13 systems begin the academic year in October. Many of these systems are in Central and South-Eastern Europe. Slovenia and Serbia are the two countries that have moved the beginning of the academic year from September to October this year.

The reasons for different starting dates for the academic year are undoubtedly related to variations in national, cultural and geographical reality. At first sight August to October may not seem a particularly significant time range for a staggered start to the academic year across the European continent. However, it can amount to a difference of up to 12 working weeks for institutions situated in the more 'extreme' systems. As the average length of a teaching semester is less than 15 weeks, this can indeed be a substantial variation.

Such differences to the start of the academic year could be difficult to factor into some forms of institutional cooperation. International joint programmes, joint research projects, and European University Alliances are just some of the forms of cooperative project that may be hindered by a significant difference in academic years.

It is also interesting to note that the patterns, although quite diversified, are stable. Indeed only Slovenia and Serbia have changed the month in which the academic year begins in 2023/2024 (from September to October).

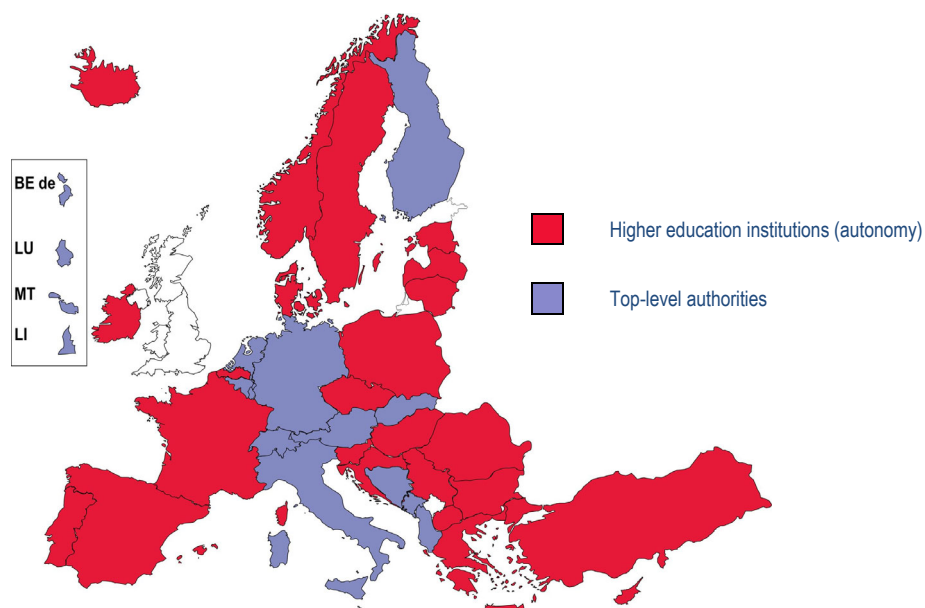

End of the academic year

While the date of the start of the academic year is significant in revealing different patterns for the academic calendar, the end date of the academic year is most often set the day before the new academic year begins. Thus for systems beginning officially on 1 September, the end date would typically be 31 August.

Institutional autonomy

Many countries point to institutional autonomy in their system with regard to setting the start date of the academic year. As Figure 2 illustrates, Europe can be divided in two parts – those countries where the decision on when to begin the academic year is left to higher education institutions' autonomy, and other countries where the date is set by top-level authorities.

Source: Eurydice.

There are slightly more systems where the decision on setting the start of the academic year is left to higher education institutions (24) compared to the systems where the decision is taken by top-level authorities (15). In some cases, such as Belgium (Flemish Community), while higher education institutions may be responsible for setting the date, they have to do so within limits set by top-level authorities.

There is no obvious relationship between this decision-making role and the actual date that is set. In other words, top-level authorities appear to be no more or less likely than higher education institutions to pick a particular month for the academic year to begin.

Semester organisation

While clear-cut differences can be seen in both the responsibility for setting the start of the academic year, and the month when the academic year actually begins, there is one aspect of the organisation of the academic year which is widely used across countries. This is the organisation of the year into two main terms or semesters. While the length of semesters may vary between countries, and the start and end dates of semesters may be very different, the semester model itself is the dominant model in Europe. Belgium and Slovakia are the only countries that have three terms (in Slovakia there may be two or three terms) while Denmark, although using the semester model, points out that some programmes have two additional breaks (half terms).

KEY POINTS

- 1) Although the extent of national diversity in start dates of the academic year could pose challenges to some forms of European cooperation, countries and higher education institutions appear to be resistant to change in calendars. Only two systems have made any changes in the last year.
- 2) The question of whether public authorities or higher educational institutions determine the start date for the academic year seems to have no clear impact on the starting month that is chosen.
- 3) A common model based on two semesters has been adopted in nearly all European higher education systems.

The organisation of the academic year in higher education – 2023/2024
Type of information (beginning of the academic year / teaching activity / holidays / examinations / end of the academic year)	Dates or periods
Beginning of the academic year	The legal act of 7 November 2013 fixes annually the beginning and end of each four-month term. The academic year is a one-year period beginning on 14 September 2023. In practice, teaching activities begin around 14 September in most institutions. In order to encourage student and staff mobility within the French Community, the government may lay down further conditions when determining this academic calendar.
Teaching activity and holidays	The first term starts on 14 September 2023; the second on 1 February 2024; the third on 1 July 2024. The two first terms include at least 12 weeks of teaching activity. For purposes of curricular organisation, each of the three four-month terms includes assessment and holiday periods.
Examinations	Curricular activities leading to an academic qualification in the first or second cycle are spread over the first two four-month terms in the academic year (with the exception of certain forms of assessment or professional integration activity). Each of these first two terms involves at least 12 weeks of activity and may not exceed four months. A period of assessment occurs at the end of each term. The third term includes assessment periods (as well as professional integration or personal project activity). Institutional autonomy
End of the academic year	13 September of the next year
Holidays	Winter holidays: 25 December 2023 – 5 January 2024 Spring holidays: - 1-5 April 2024 and 29 April – 3 Mai 2024 for Hautes Écoles and Écoles Supérieures des Arts; - 1-12 April 2024 for Universities. Summer holidays: 1 July – 13 September 2024 (The third interval includes, when applicable, assessment periods, professional integration or personal work activities for student concerned. It is usually considered as summer holidays for students not concerned by those activities).

Teaching and assessment activities except professional induction, excursions, visits and internships do not take place on Sundays nor official public holidays. If public holidays fall on a Saturday or a Sunday, no replacement is foreseen.
Number of intervals: 3	Length of intervals: no longer than 4 months (each of the first two four-month terms involves at least 12 weeks of activity and is no longer than four months). At the end of each of these intervals, an assessment period is organised for the acquisition of credits. This will cover at least all the learning activities organised during the four-month period. The third interval includes assessment periods, as well as professional integration or personal work activities (cf. during summer holidays), but it should be noted that examinations may already have been marked and passed by students at the end of the first two terms.

The organisation of the academic year in higher education – 2023/2024
Type of information (beginning of the academic year / teaching activity / holidays / examinations / end of the academic year)	Dates or periods
Beginning of the academic year	1 October is assumed as the official start of the new academic year. However, due to the autonomy of higher education institutions (HEIs), starting dates vary from one institution to another.
Teaching activity and holidays	The academic year consists of two semesters (winter and summer). However, the length of teaching activity (lectures and practical trainings) differs from one HEI to another due to their autonomy. Examinations dates, holidays (other than the officially announced public and religious holidays) are determined at institutional level.
Examinations	The examination dates are determined at institutional level, however, they are usually scheduled within the period starting from mid-January to mid-February at the latest (end of the winter semester), and within the period from mid-June to mid-July. Students who fail to take or pass an exam on the date within the indicated period, are supposed to take/re-take the exam usually in early September.
End of the academic year	HEIs are autonomous. The academic year generally ends between end-June and mid-July.
Public holidays (occasional/national/religious holidays)	Certain dates are regarded as official holidays (religious, national, public): 22 September 2023 24 December 2023 3 March 2024 1 May 2024 6 May 2024 24-25 May 2024 Students have a break for about 2 weeks for Christmas and Easter holidays. Each HEI celebrates the day of its patron, on which teaching activity is not carried out.

Additional notes

Although different universities in Croatia (nine public universities in total) – and individual faculties and schools in some universities – are fully autonomous in deciding on their own individual academic calendar, the calendar provided above is the actual calendar for the largest Croatian university, University of Zagreb, and is the most common template.

Teaching activity in the first ('winter') semester of the academic year generally starts at the end of the September or beginning of October. All faculties traditionally have a two-week Christmas and New Year break in the last week of December and first week of January. After this break, the teaching activity of the first semester is resumed and it goes on until late January. The winter exam session generally takes place between the end of January and mid-or end of February. Teaching activity in the second ('summer') semester begins in late February and lasts until late May or early June. The summer exam session takes place from mid-June to mid-July, followed by a summer break until late August, when the autumn exam session is scheduled. It ends mid or late September.

Article 70 of the Act on Scientific Activity and Higher Education (Zakon o znanstvenoj djelatnosti i visokom obrazovanju, Official Gazette, 119/2022) stipulates that the academic year starts on 1 October of the current year and ends on 30 September the following calendar year. Teaching activity starts between 1 September and 1 October and it cannot start before 1 September for the academic year in question. Teaching activity is organized in semesters or trimesters according to the steering documents (statute) of higher education institutions.

Additional notes

The academic year begins on 1 September each year and ends on 31 August of the following year (1 September 2023 – 31 August 2024). Teaching activities are divided into two semesters.

Higher Education Institutions (HEIs) in Greece are autonomous as regards to their modus operandi. The exact dates for the beginning and end of each semester are defined by the HEI's Senate or Board. Only in exceptional cases is the semester's extension allowed in order to cover the necessary teaching weekly hours of a module, but in no case can this extension be more than two weeks. The internal regulation of the institution regulates the arrangements of the study programme.

Each semester includes at least 13 weeks of teaching. The end of each semester marks the beginning of the exam period. During the period of exams, no teaching activity is taking place, so that students can take part in the exams. Students may be reassessed in the modules of both semesters before the beginning of the winter semester, during September. Students, who have certified dyslexia before their entry to the HEI, can be examined orally.

Students who have completed full-time attendance, meaning they have attended the necessary number of semesters leading to a degree, have the opportunity to take part in the exams at any semester, either winter or spring. This means that they can be examined in any course they choose regardless of it is taught in the winter or spring semester.

The total academic days and the total number of holidays cannot be estimated because the exact dates for the beginning and end of each semester are determined by each HEI's Senate or Board. Hence, dates in the academic calendar may vary slightly depending on the institution.

Additional notes

The academic calendars are determined each year at institutional level, meaning that HEIs may have different calendars during the same academic year. For this reason, the information about dates/periods can only be approximate and is given by comparing calendars of different HEIs from previous years and by extracting the most common dates. Moreover, majority of the HEIs do not have their academic calendars available on their webpages, so calendars from previous years and common practices were used to generate expected and approximate calendar for the next academic year.

According to the Law on Higher Education, article 79, the academic calendar is comprised of 30 working weeks.

There are 6 non-working public holidays in Serbia that are listed above.

The organisation of the academic year in Europe – 2023/2024

The academic calendar contains national data on how the academic year is structured (beginning of the academic year, term times, holidays and examination periods). Differences between university and non-university study programmes are also highlighted. The information is available for 37 countries.

The Eurydice Network's task is to understand and explain how Europe's different education systems are organised and how they work. The network provides descriptions of national education systems, comparative studies devoted to specific topics, indicators and statistics. All Eurydice publications are available free of charge on the Eurydice website or in print upon request. Through its work, Eurydice aims to promote understanding, cooperation, trust and mobility at European and international levels. The network consists of national units located in European countries and is co-ordinated by the European Education and Culture Executive Agency (EACEA).
